PRODUCT RECALL MANAGEMENT CHALLENGES

Product recalls can be exceptionally damaging to a company's brand and reputation. With the threat of government sanctions, class action lawsuits and loss of customer confidence potentially looming, it is important that organizations have a well-defined product recall plan.

A consumer product recall is the removal from distribution, sale, or consumer use of a product that does not comply with legislation, or poses an unacceptable risk to the health and safety of consumers or users of the product. While some recalls are ordered by government agencies, voluntary / preventive recalls should always be conducted by organizations in situations where products don't meet internal quality controls or pose a risk to health. In situations where there is a risk of customer illness or injury, the communication to the customers and product recovery processes need to be set in motion quickly and efficiently to mitigate the risk of a negative outcome.

With this in mind, PARM's Product Recall Management Services can help your organization expertly manage the logistics of a recall, limit business interruption and protect your relationship with customers and dealers.
